The River. The River Trent here forms the boundary between Staffordshire and Derbyshire, and for the pleasure and benefit of the people of Burton the Derbyshire bank, which is well wooded, is laid out in pretty walks and raised terraces, and are open to ground. From the church tower just visible, fine views may be obtained.

St Modwen's Church. Here, on the island of Andresey in the seventh century, the Irish saint Modwen built a church and dedicated it to St. Andrew. The church has gone, but 300 years later a Benedictine Monastery arose from its ruins, and of this establishment a few ruins still remain, though the present Abbey Church bears date 1720.
